It's saying my question was answered live, I don't recall hearing it answered.

If I deposited my PPP funds into one of our business accounts are those funds specifically earmarked or do I get to choose which transactions I put forth for forgiveness?

Sorry that was my typing. :) The account doesn't matter to SBA. It might to the lender. But you just have to prove you spent that amount on eligible payroll and eligible operating expenses.

Can you clarify this statute please.

"An eligible recipient shall be eligible for forgiveness of indebtedness on a covered loan in an amount equal to the sum of the following costs incurred in payments made during the covering period, such as payroll etc..."

My question is: If I spend the sum of the loan on payroll (with any corporate funds) have I satisfied this statute?

Does segregating the funds into a specific bank account change the rules of the program vs someone who deposited into main operating account?
