To Whom It May Concern:

My name is James Brant. And I've known Immesha Miller for a short time. She is a special young lady who faithfully serves in the music ministry where I have the honor of serving as worship pastor. She is committed, dedicated, and passionate about what she does. When she shows up, she gives her best. She doesn't just participate—she contributes. Her presence strengthens the team, and others are influenced by her consistency and heart for ministry.

What stands out most about Immesha is her character. She has proven herself to be trustworthy, dependable, and sincere. She has also proven to be a true friend—supportive, honest, and genuine both on and off the platform.

She has shared parts of her journey with me, and what's powerful is how she has taken ownership of her past. Instead of making excuses, she accepted responsibility where needed and chose to grow. She is learning to forgive herself, move forward, and walk toward healing and success. That takes courage.

Immesha is not only growing in her gift, but she is growing as a woman of strength and integrity. I am proud of the progress she has made and confident that her best days are still ahead.

Sincerely,

James Brant III
