GRICE - CONFIDENTIAL

Q. In the Medilink transcript you describe the fact that banks have communicated with each other about a recall to be extraordinary. Is that a fair characterization of your testimony in Medilink?

A. Yeah. Now, 2010, that was more extraordinary than it is now, but it is unusual, right, because -- let me just finish -- it is a kind of mea culpa, I, the sender, am calling you, the receiver, and saying Mr. Schoenfeld, we've got a, you know, I've got a problem and I need your help in resolving it. I don't -- I don't hear those often.

Perhaps for, you know, risk exposure or legal reasons, banks rarely admit to errors. But this is an area where the sending bank, who is trying to recall a wire, has to go through some steps to find the right person to talk to and to effectuate the recall.

Q. Mr. Grice, in your BSA/AML report you talk about banks' internal policies and procedures to comply with various laws and regulations. Do you recall that?

A. I do.

Q. And you say that banks generally adhere to their practices and procedures or policies and procedures when they are conducting business, correct?

A. Is that the question, do banks generally adhere to their policies and procedures?

Q. Correct.

A. Yes, they do.

Q. And banks adhere to their policies in some respects in order to ensure that they comply with BSA/AML laws, correct?

A. Certainly that's one objective.

Q. Did you review Chain Bridge's wire transfer policy as part of your analysis for this report or your BSA/AML report?

A. I don't recall as I sit here. I believe so, but I don't -- I saw the wire
