Gaming Compact Amendment Approval Process

STILLAGUAMISH
TRIBE OF INDIANS

“The Stillaguamish Tribe looks forward to our continued collaboration and partnership with the Washington State Gaming Commission. This relationship underscores a mutual commitment to fostering a sustainable gaming environment that benefits all stakeholders while honoring the Stillaguamish people's cultural heritage and economic aspirations. Together, we aim to set a standard for responsible gaming practices that can serve as a model for others.”

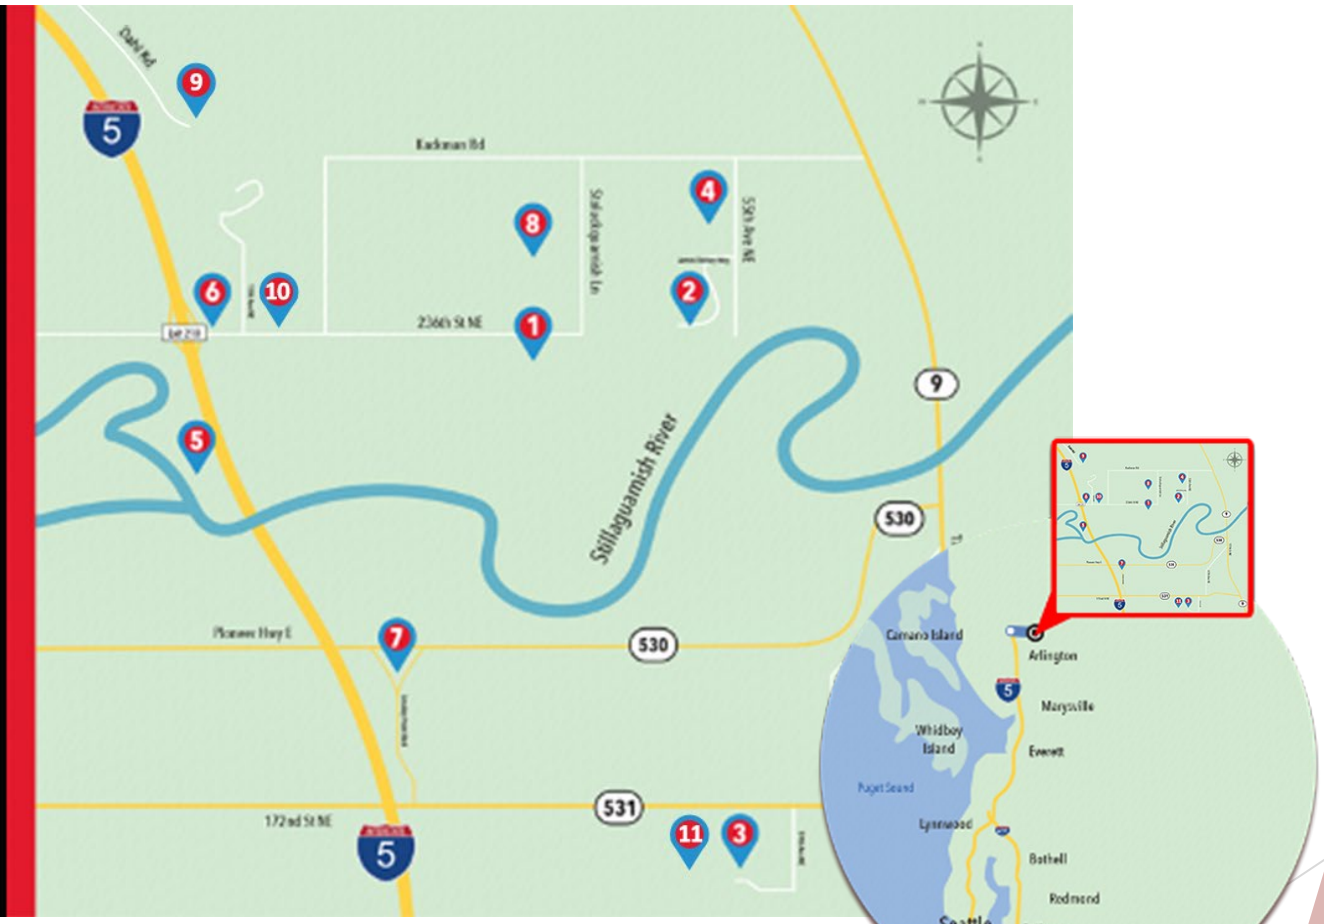

CHAIRMAN, ERIC WHITE

TRIBAL HISTORY

- Stuləgʷábš, English translation known as Stillaguamish
  - Refers to our people who lived along the Stillaguamish River and camped along its tributaries
- 1855 – The Tribe resided on Camano, the mouth and main stem of the Stillaguamish River, as well as the north and south forks
- 1855 – Treaty of Point Elliott
- October 27, 1976 – The Tribe received federal recognition
  - 1974 – Boldt Decision affirmed, recognized treaty rights, made eligible for federal services
- 2014 – The Tribe granted reservation from federal government
  - 64 acres in Snohomish County, WA near the Stillaguamish River

TRIBAL ADMINISTRATION

- Housing Department
- In 2016 the Tribe, with its Tribal citizens, went through a series of hands-on interactive workshops to envision a new Stillaguamish Village. Based on the workshops, a final master site plan was developed. This project was fully Tribal funded without the use of grants. In addition to the 15 housing units created within the Stillaguamish Village, the Tribe has 49 additional scattered site homes that are fully Tribal funded and subsidized through Tribal hard dollars.
- Canoe House-Carving Shed – This building provides a space to engage in our canoe and carving practices. The Tribe's carvers host classes such as tool making, canoe building, totem pole carvings, carving art. The canoe family gathers here for training and social events, as well as stores their canoes in this location.
- Holistic Healing Center – This building hosts the Tribe's health practitioners, such as family practice doctors, mental health counselors, and massage therapists. This building also has a community room, which is open for community-based gatherings, such as weaving, cooking, and language classes.
- Elders Campus – The Elders Campus is comprised of six units: the elders longhouse, four elders cottages, and the elders park. These units are all ADA compliant, highly energy efficient, and come with a whole house generator to assist during power outages. The Tribe subsidizes elders' rent through Tribal hard dollars.
- Single Family Homes – There are currently five single family homes that sit along a neighborhood park. Families that live in these units pay no more than 20% of their adjusted income on rent. The Tribe subsidizes rent through Tribal hard dollars.
- Playground Park – The playground includes elements that have been designed with a nice touch of nature play, including a log jam concept inspired by the traditional stick game that includes large slahal sticks made from logs. Our Tribal carvers built a beautiful dugout canoe as a play element. The park includes a public restroom.

STILLAGUAMISH HEALTH CLINIC

- Youth Services
  - Goal is to make getting an education as accessible as possible
- Open and available to Stillaguamish citizens
- Cultural events, funerals, Summer Youth Program

NATURAL RESOURCES BUILDING

- Created in 1974 due to the Boldt Decision
- Manages, protects, and conserves the natural resources that are required to sustain healthy populations of fish, shellfish, and wildlife within the Stillaguamish Tribe's usual and accustomed areas (Stillaguamish watershed)

The Stillaguamish Tribe's Natural Resources Department focuses on protecting, enhancing, and restoring important treaty resources that are co-managed with other Treaty Tribes and the State of Washington. The Tribe's Natural Resources Department is home to 4 separate programs which include: Fisheries, Wildlife, Water Quality, and Environmental Restoration & Stewardship.
The work the Natural Resources Department is able to achieve through shared State and Tribal economic success and partnerships helps ensure greater climate resiliency and environmental stewardship for all Washingtonians.

Some key examples of this work includes:
Two Tribally Owned/Operated Hatcheries that produce ESA listed populations of Stillaguamish Chinook. The fish released from these hatcheries are genetically indistinct from their wild cohorts, and are produced solely to stave off extinction, while also serving as scientific indicators of where harvest impacts are hitting our salmon resources the hardest. Due to the co-management relationship between the Stillaguamish Tribe and state agencies like Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW), we can responsibly manage salmon fisheries in Washington State, and work together to mitigate impacts on our stocks from northern fisheries in Canada and Alaska.

The Stillaguamish Tribe and WDFW have worked together over the past few years to invest over $5.3 Million dollars in completing 318 acres of wetland connectivity work, opening up a combined total of 7.3 miles of tidal channels that will improve climate resiliency, and provide refuge and nursery habitat to ESA listed salmon populations in Port Susan Bay.

236TH ST NE SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS

Stillaguamish Tribe Completes 236th St NE Safety Improvements Project

- The Stillaguamish Tribe of Indians finished the 236th St NE Safety Improvements Project in September 2022. This project enhanced safety and environmental features along the roadway between 13th Ave NE and 35th Ave NE in Snohomish County.

- Key improvements include:
  - Wider shoulders and improved sight lines
  - Roundabout at the 19th Avenue intersection
  - Replaced fish barrier with a wildlife crossing
  - Raised roadway with new culverts for better water flow and animal passage
  - Stormwater management ponds
  - New sidewalks, curbs, and pavement markings

- Construction techniques minimized road closures, and detours were used when necessary. Access to homes and businesses remained open throughout the project.
