While at Hewlett Packard, Glenn chaired the Ethics & Compliance Committee, providing strategic legal counsel across a complex portfolio that included anti-corruption and FCPA compliance, securities and accounting fraud prevention, export controls, data privacy, mergers and acquisitions, and emerging areas such as Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) and artificial intelligence governance. Glenn directed the company's responses to investigations and inquiries from DOJ, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and criminal and civil authorities across Asia, Europe, and Latin America, while overseeing all internal investigations relating to alleged ethical and legal violations and implementing remedial actions that strengthened the company's compliance culture.

Before joining the private sector, Glenn served as Assistant Chief and Acting Deputy Chief of DOJ's Fraud Section, where he led high-profile investigations of Fortune 500 corporations and financial institutions involving securities and commodities fraud, insider trading, bank and mortgage fraud, money laundering, government procurement fraud, TARP fraud, and FCPA violations. Notably, Glenn spearheaded the investigation into the manipulation of LIBOR and other benchmark interest rates by global financial institutions, culminating in a $325 million criminal resolution with Rabobank that is viewed as a significant precedent in market manipulation enforcement.

"Glenn's DOJ experience combined with board-level in-house compliance leadership positions him as a trusted advisor for companies navigating today's enforcement landscape," said David Bitkower, Co-Chair of the Investigations, Compliance, and Defense Practice.
